There is other evidence for favorable attitudes toward the retarded in early history, but attitudes varied from age to age and from country to country. The concept of remediation did not emerge until the nineteenth century.

Earlier, in 1798, Itard published an account of his attempt to train the "wild boy of Aveyron." A rash of efforts to habilitate retarded persons followed. Training schools were developed in Europe and the United States in the 1800s; however, these early schools did not fulfill their promise, and by the end of the nineteenth century large, inhumane warehouses for retarded persons existed. The notion of habilitation through training had largely been abandoned and was not to reappear
